The Business of Recycling & Local Economic Development

Dear ##[Name | First]##,

From waste generators to service providers to manufacturers, Michigan business and industry is an essential cornerstone of the state's circular economy. And, recycled materials are becoming a key feedstock source for those manufacturing new products. In this shifting landscape, private and public sector leaders alike can benefit from understanding the roles that businesses play in the recycling ecosystem.

Join state, regional, and local circular economy leaders to network and explore the business and development opportunities of recycling. This meeting, which is last of five focused on different Michigan regions, will explore regional opportunities, challenges, and discussion about recycling economic development.

Don't miss this opportunity to learn more about the initiatives and circular economy in your region, and collaborate to bring new opportunity into your work.

This event is the fifth in a series taking place across the state. The Upper Peninsula Region of Michigan is unique, and The Business of Recycling & Local Economic Development is an informative and interactive workshop that will dive into current recycling initiatives, economic development, and opportunities in the region.

This interactive event will take place from 10:30 AM - 2:00 PM on April 9th in Marquette. The specific workshop location will be made available upon your RSVP to the event. The event is free, but seats are limited, so click the button below to RSVP today!
